Designs for Resort-Style Living

Architect John Geshay, AIA of Geshay Associates, Inc. begins each project by listening to his clients to better understand their needs and aspirations. John Geshay's experience includes studies in Florence, Italy as well as 25 years of custom home design in the Naples area. Together, the architect and clients quickly embrace a common vision, and through design, selection and detail are able to execute this vision to exceed everyone's expectations.

The front of the house below features a motor court, which leads to a private courtyard with a formal entry porch. Special architectural features include cast stone trim, which is combined with natural coquina stone panels, giving the home a well established, timeless appearance. Gas-flamed lanterns flank the impressive stone gate posts. Custom designed aluminum gates and railings simulating leafy vines adorn the balconies and enclose the entry.

The rear of the house was designed to be "resort-like", with informal indoor/outdoor spaces and spectacular water views.

When the doors are pulled to one side, the Master Bedroom feels more like a porch than a room. The dining, sitting and deck areas overlook an infinity edge pool that is the backdrop to the beautiful cove beyond.

John Geshay has created for his clients a setting that is luxurious, relaxed, and well-appointed from house to garden. His clients sum it up when they say, "It's home, and we love it!"
